Apparently grandpa Roland liked the three musketeers, but no one knows anymore why he named the non- vintage blend "Cuvée Aramis". That's why the champagne is now called Secret of Aramis.

The history of the family started with André Champion in 1929, the year when the brand Champagne André Champion was merchandised for the first time. Later on the founder will increase considerably his vineyard on the terroir of Chouilly, in the famous Côte des Blancs, on the best soils for the renowned Chardonnay grape.

His early death will propel his elder son Roland, 16-year-old at that time, at the head of the family company. Roland took over the family business with courage and dignity and continued to increase the family s estate. The champagne house is then re-named Champagne Roland Champion in 1951.

The descendants of Roland and Jacqueline Champion: François, Vincent and Clara as well as their children Carole, Ambroise, Clémence, Astrid and Félix represent this family inheritance today. François is henceforth the wine maker of the house.

From generations the Champion family has been proud to make you share its passion for champagnes that offer character and prestige to accompany the most memorable moments of your life, just like its founders wished.
